Pinelli suffered a laceration of the right knee, laceration of the forehead and a confused chest.

J. Richard Harner, 30, Littlestown restaurant proprietor, suffered a fractured right leg and contusions and his wife, Mrs. Hazel Harner, 30, Littlestown, had lacerations of the face and head and is suffering from shock.

Former Local Youth Given Special Prize

Robert J. "Bobbie" McConaghie, 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. James R. McConaghie, of Vicksburg, Miss., former residents of Gettysburg, has been awarded a $1,000 scholarship at Phillips-Exeter academy, at Exeter, New Hampshire, according to information received in Gettysburg today. Mr. McConaghie was superintendent of the battlefield for a number of years before being transferred to the Vicksburg battlefield.

Young McConaghie, a junior and honor student at Carr Central high school in Vicksburg, was one of a limited number of students in the county who qualified for the award.

Phillips-Exeter has a restricted enrollment and the scholarship is considered a high honor for the former Gettysburg young man who attended grade schools here before moving south.

MAN IS JAILED AFTER "FIGHT"

A Plainville, Conn., man who gave his name as Ervin Vincent Smith, and who was allegedly "beaten up" on the Jack's Mountain road in Hamilton township Thursday night, by two Adams county men, refused to press charges against the latter at his own hearing before Justice of the Peace Robert P. Snyder this morning.

Smith was arrested by state police of the Gettysburg sub-station on a disorderly conduct charge, and on a charge of operating the automobile of John Rudisill, Gettysburg R. 3, pleaded guilty to both charges, and was given one day in jail on each in default of the fines imposed. Squire Snyder imposed a fine of $5 and costs on the disorderly conduct charge and $10 and costs on the code violation.

Involved In Fight

Smith told authorities that he was on his way from Martinsburg, W. Va., to his home in Connecticut, and reached Gettysburg Thursday. That night he and the two county men went for a ride, police said. On the Jack's Mountain road an altercation took place, in which Smith was "pummeled" by the other two, police were told. Persons living on the road saw the fight and told police.

At this morning's hearing, Smith said he had been drinking and had "made a fool" of himself. He wanted police to "forget" about the fight. The latter said they did not witness it. The one-day concurrent jail sentences were recommended because, the state police said, Smith has a leg injury, and should not be confined in jail.

INDUCTIVE WILL ISSUE $200,000 IN NEW BONDS

The Inductive Equipment Corporation today announced a new bond issue of $200,000 in 20-year bonds, and the calling in of old bonds, under what is termed by John R. Gaston, president and general manager as "a consolidation and simplification of the bond structure" of the local corporation, now nearing the end of its third year.

The corporation was organized in 1945, with residents of Gettysburg and Adams county subscribing to $100,000 worth of the original issue of bonds. The firm also obtained $100,000 from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

"The Inductive Equipment Corporation has now grown to a worth of more than $300,000," Mr. Gaston said today. "Instead of having three or four accounts to pay, we are combining them into one."

Will Pay Tax
"The old bonds sold in this community carried five per cent interest, and the government loan four per cent interest, but the company will pay the four mills tax."

With the issuance of the new $200,000 bonds, the old bonds will be called in, and the RFC War Assets administration, and other loans paid off. Mr. Gaston said that 90 cents out of each dollar of the old bond issue had been borrowed against these bonds. This will be reduced, in the bond issue, to 60 cents, he said.

"All the savings effected through the new bond issue will be passed on to the community," he said. Another advantage of the new bonds is that they may be used as collateral.

Steady Growth

"The company has shown a steady growth since its organization in September, 1945," Mr. Gaston said. "We employ approximately 150 persons, and have a backlog of orders to October, 1949."

The corporation has the support of both the local banking institutions. (Continued on Page 2)

Impressive Ceremonies Mark Official Dedication Of New Lutheran Seminary Library

Gettysburg's Lutheran Theological seminary dedicated its new $230,000 library Thursday afternoon at a special service held on the portico of the library.

Dean Luther A. Weigle, of the Yale University Divinity school, gave the dedicatory address. Dr. A. R. Wentz, president of the seminary, dedicated the library, stating it has been "erected to the glory of God for the use of this theological seminary, its students and teachers; built as a monument to the Christian generosity of the friends of the institution and designed as a fitting instrument to increase the educational facilities of the church, to enlarge the horizons of useful Christian knowledge, to further the cause of theological study and ministerial training, to deepen the springs of spiritual truth, and otherwise to prepare well furnished ministers of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, Who is the Way, the Truth and the Life."

Audience Sings Psalms
The program opened with Doctor Wentz reading the versicle and psalm with the audience responding. The psalm opened "Teach me, O Lord, the way of Thy statutes, and I shall keep it unto the end. Give me understanding and I shall keep Thy law." The anthem, "Lift Up Your Heads," was sung by the seminary choir and the audience sang the hymn "O Thou Whose Feet Have Climbed Life's Hill."

Russell Ritter, of the Ritter Brothers firm which built the building, then turned the key of the library, symbolic of its completion, over to the architect, J. Alfred Hamme, who in turn handed it to the Rev. Dr. C. S. Simonton, chairman of the building committee. Doctor Simonton, after expressing his pleasure as an alumnus in the new building, turned the key over to Doctor Wentz who formally accepted and dedicated the building. He then gave the key to the librarian, the Rev. Herbert H. Schmidt, who unlocked the door to the brick structure.

Dean Weigle, speaking on the tradition of separation of church and state in the United States said that the tradition has its roots in the ideals of those who founded the country.

Freedom To Grow
"Those who came here to find a new life in what was then a wilderness brought with them the idea of separation of church and state. When the first amendment of the constitution guaranteed such separation it was not a new thing, brought about, as some claim, by the rationalist viewpoint of the men who drew up the law, but was something founded in the Christian principles of the people who came here. Long before the United States was founded the Christians recognized that true religious freedom can come only from separation of church and state. But this does not mean that the state is exempt from the moral law. Nor does the separation of church and state mean that the church must be held down, as it is in Russia. Separation of church and state in America means the emancipation of the church from state bonds, giving it the freedom to grow."

Rare Books, Manuscripts And Thousands Of Other Volumes In $230,000 Seminary Library

The new Seminary library is a Georgian Colonial building designed in the same beautiful tradition as The Church of the Abiding Presence just a short distance away. The facade repeats the well-known columned portico and red brick. It has the large windows, the inviting doorway, the long-lived slate roof, the low shrubbery, and the first floor just a few short steps above the ground.

The walls are faced with oversized colonial bricks above a granite base. Buff Indiana limestone provides the trim, such as window sills, entrance frame, and fluted front columns. The portico steps are of granite and the portico floor of natural flagstone. The exterior woodwork is all of durable southern cypress. The roof is Virginia slate. All structural parts of the building are fully fire resistive, wood being used only for trim and exposed finish in the reading rooms.

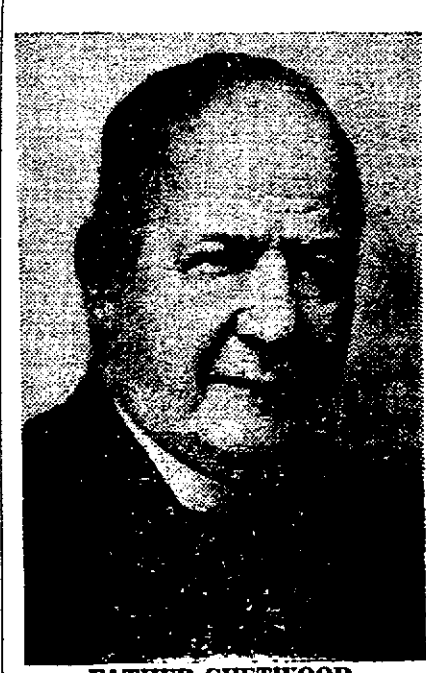

Free Use Of Color
The architecture of this room is simple and depends largely upon the free use of color. The floor is laid in hand-made Moravian tiles in rich natural red such as you might have seen had you visited the early colonial buildings of Bethlehem, Philadelphia or New Jersey. The walls are simple plaster painted blue green. The doors are rich mahogany such as the colonial ship-masters brought back from their

"All the savings effected through the new bond issue will be passed on to the community," he said. Another advantage of the new bonds is that they may be used as collateral.

Steady Growth

"The company has shown a steady growth since its organization in September, 1945," Mr. Gaston said. "We employ approximately 150 persons, and have a backlog of orders to October, 1949."

Impressive Ceremonies Mark Official Dedication Of New Lutheran Seminary Library

Gettysburg's Lutheran Theological seminary dedicated its new $230,000 library Thursday afternoon at a special service held on the portico of the library.

Dean Luther A. Weigle, of the Yale University Divinity school, gave the dedicatory address. Dr. A. R. Wentz, president of the seminary dedicated the library, stating it has been "erected to the glory of God for the use of this theological seminary, its students and teachers; built as a monument to the Christian generosity of the friends of the institution and designed as a fitting instrument to increase the educational facilities of the Church, to enlarge the horizons of useful Christian knowledge, to further the cause of theological study and ministerial training, to deepen the springs of spiritual truth, and otherwise to prepare well furnished ministers of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, Who is the Way, the Truth and the Life."

Audience Sings Psalms

The program opened with Doctor Wentz reading the versicle and psalm with the audience responding. The psalm opened "Teach me, O Lord, the way of Thy statutes, and I shall keep it unto the end. Give me understanding and I shall keep Thy law." The anthem, "Lift Up Your Heads," was sung by the seminary choir and the audience sang the hymn "O Thou Whose Feet Have Climbed Life's Hill."

Russell Ritter, of the Ritter Brothers firm which built the building, then turned the key of the library, symbolic of its completion, over to the architect, J. Alfred Hamme, who in turn handed it to the Rev. Dr. C. S. Simonton, chairman of the building committee. Doctor Simonton, after expressing his pleasure as an alumnus in the new building, turned the key over to Doctor Wentz who formally accepted and dedicated the building. He then gave the key to the librarian, the Rev. Herbert H. Schmidt, who unlocked the door to the brick structure.

Dean Weigle, speaking on the tradition of separation of church and state in the United States said that the tradition has its roots in the ideals of those who founded the country.

Freedom To Grow

"Those who came here to find a new life in what was then a wilderness brought with them the idea of separation of church and state. When the first amendment of the constitution guaranteed such separation it was not a new thing, brought about, as some claim, by the rationalist viewpoint of the men who drew up the law, but was something founded in the Christian principles of the people who came here. Long before the United States was founded the Christians recognized that true religious freedom can come only from separation of church and state. But this does not mean that the state is exempt from the moral law. Nor does the separation of church and state mean that the church must be held down, as it is in Russia. Separation of church and state in America means the emancipation of the church from state bonds, giving it the freedom to grow."

"Religious freedom is a basic principle of our government."

Rare Books, Manuscripts And Thousands Of Other Volumes In $230,000 Seminary Library

The new Seminary library is a Georgian Colonial building designed in the same beautiful tradition as The Church of the Abiding Presence just a short distance away. The facade repeats the well-known columned portico and red brick. It has the large windows, the inviting doorway, the long-lived slate roof, the low shubbery, and the first floor just a few short steps above the ground.

The walls are faced with oversized colonial bricks above a granite base. Buff Indiana limestone provides the trim, such as window sills, entrance frame, and fluted front columns. The portico steps are of granite and the portico floor of natural flagstone. The exterior woodwork is all of durable southern cypress. The roof is Virginia slate. All structural parts of the building are fully fire resistive, wood being used only for trim and exposed finish in the reading rooms.

Study Center

Located directly opposite the administration building, the library naturally becomes the study center for the Seminary. To this end a conscious effort has been made to build beautifully so that an inviting, colorful interior would encourage even the casual visitor to pick out a book and a comfortable chair and start to read.

As one enters the building he finds himself in a small foyer with stairways leading to the basement and to the second floor. Beyond the foyer is the circulation room and the charging desk. Here the student receives and returns the books that he takes from the building. Behind the charging desk to the left are several hundred reserved books, and in an alcove at the right is the card catalog file of all books in the library.

Free Use Of Color

The architecture of this room is simple and depends largely upon the free use of color. The floor is laid in hand-made Moravian tiles in rich natural red such as you might have seen had you visited the early colonial buildings of Bethlehem, Philadelphia or New Jersey. The walls are simple plaster painted blue green. The doors are rich red mahogany such as the colonial ship-masters brought back from their

BICENTENNIAL BRINGS BACK OLD CUSTOMS

Reading, Pa., May 6 (AP)—Shoofly pie and apple pan dowdy—gastronomic delights of the Pennsylvania Dutch—were given a musical introduction to America not so long ago. This summer they'll be back in the limelight along with many a Pennsylvania Dutch folk tradition and custom as thousands of visitors converge on Reading to help the city celebrate its 200th anniversary.

Although this city, named from the ancient borough of Reading, of Berkshire in England, was founded in 1748 by Thomas and Richard Penn, sons of Quaker William Penn, it now bears the distinctive characteristics of the Pennsylvania Dutch.

The "Dutch" are descendants from refugees who fled their Palatinate farms in Germany to come to the new free land of America.

Here in Penn's land of tolerance, in a section the Indians called Tulpohocken—meaning "Turtle Land"—they cleared land and built up rich farms in the tradition of their native country.

And they brought their language (a corruption of German), their superstitions, their art, their cuisine and their religion.

In Pennsylvania Dutch lore, the heart represents the heart of God, who in his bounty and goodness, was kindly disposed to the early settlers.

The tulip symbolizes hope and recurring life.

For Reading's bicentennial celebration a special seal has been designed depicting the tulip growing out of the heart.

Another symbol that figures prominently in Pennsylvania Dutch art is the "Distelfink," a thrush-like bird, painted in vivid hues.

The Pennsylvania Dutch are religious folk and every Protestant church has its annual "Harvest Home Service." Then parishioners bring the fruit of their fields and place it on the altar.

Many funerals are not complete without a dinner for the mourners. Raising pie is a basic part of such meals and is known colloquially as "funeral pie."

One religious group, the Amish, have retained their ancient customs in every detail. Their horse and buggies will be seen moving leisurely along the high-speed highways leading to the market places of Reading. They still dress in their somber black costumes and the women cover their heads with black bonnets.

Home of Pretzels

Pennsylvania Dutch farmers frequently sow their seed according to "signs" and many of them swear by the Almanacs that predict what the weather will be for a full year.

The Christmas tree made its American debut among the Pennsylvania Dutch in 1848 and the pretzel industry centers in Reading where about one-third of all the nation's salted twisters are made.

To mark Reading's bicentennial, the summer will be filled with events to commemorate the city's founding. A huge industrial show during the week of August 14 to September 6 will be held at the fair grounds.

In salutation to the American town that took its name, Reading, England.

A Weak, Run-Down Feeling Is Often A Warning That The Red-Blood Is Getting Low

If you do not feel like your real self, do not have the urge to be up and doing, why not check-up on your blood strength? Look at the palms of your hands, your fingernails, your lips, the tips of your ears—are they pale and off color?

Every day—every hour—millions of new red-blood-cells must pour forth from the marrow of your bones to replace those that are worn-out. A low blood count may affect you in several ways: no appetite, underweight, no energy, a run-down condition, lack of resistance to infection and disease.

To get real relief you must keep up your blood strength. Medical authorities, by analysis of the blood, have by positive proof shown that SSS Tonic is amazingly effective in building up low blood strength in non-organic nutritional anemia. This is due to the SSS Tonic formula which contains special and potent activating ingredients.

Also SSS Tonic helps you enjoy the food you eat by increasing the gastric digestive juice which is non-organically too little or scanty—thus the stomach will have little cause to get balky with gas, bloating and give off that sour "red" taste.

Don't wait! Energize your body with rich, red-blood. Start on SSS Tonic now. As vigorous blood surges throughout your whole body, greater freshness and strength should make you eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better, have a healthy color glow in your skin—your flesh fill out hollow places. Millions of bottles sold. Get a bottle from your drug store. SSS Tonic helps Build Smoother Health.

BOY KILLS GIRL IN LOVE RAGE

Lancaster, Pa., May 6 (AP)—School-girl Phoebe Artz died Wed. 12 hours after she was brutally beaten on a street in nearby Denver.

Wilford Lee Pottelger, 16, identified by police as the boy friend of the 15-year-old girl, was held in the Lancaster county jail without bail on a technical charge of aggravated assault and battery.

A state policeman quoted Pottelger as telling the girl's parents a few minutes after the tragedy Tuesday night:

"No other fellow can have her if I can't."

The girl died in Ephrata General hospital, where she was taken last night. She had suffered a skull fracture and was unconscious.

State Police Sergeant Stiles H. Smith, testifying at Pottelger's hearing before Justice of the Peace Arthur M. Yeager, related this version of the incident:

Phoebe and three girl friends were talking in front of a neighbor's home at 8:45 Tuesday evening when Wilford walked up to the girl, threw land has announced that 14 firms and the municipal authority will present an exhibit.

The industrial exhibit will be 1948 evidence that a 200-year-old prediction has come true.

The Penns. when they founded Reading, advertised "a new town of great natural advantages of location and destined to become a prosperous place."

her to the sidewalk and began beating her head against the pavement. Her screams brought Mrs. Raymond Pasnacht from her nearby adjoining home. She found Phoebe lying on the sidewalk unconscious and saw Pottelger walk away. A few minutes later he appeared at the Artz home and blurted out:

"Your daughter is lying on the pavement. She may be dead. I don't care."

"No other fellow can have her if I can't."

right in democracy. Without religious freedom all other freedoms are in danger. Yet the state must rely on the church to teach the moral values which make democracy possible.

"That the United States is a Christian nation has been held by various courts of the land. This is not to say that Christianity is the official language of the state, but that Christianity is the religion of the majority of our citizens and the Jewish-Christian morals and tradition are a basis for our laws."

Majority Are Protestants
He also presented an analysis of the proportions of the population which profess various faiths. Fifty-two and a half per cent of the total population profess a religious faith, he said. The number of members in the churches vary from 23 1/2 million Roman Catholics, 14 million Baptists, 11 million Methodists, a half million Lutherans, four and a half million Jews, three million Presbyterians down into groups with a few hundred thousand members. Sixty per cent of the church membership is in the Protestant churches, he said.

The "Friends" set as a goal for the various chapters the raising of $5,000 to refurbish the refectory at the seminary.

At the trustees' meeting a system of traveling furloughs for the professors of the seminary, beginning with those who have been members of the faculty at the seminary the longest, was adopted.

Doctor Wentz, who is due by length of service to have the first furlough, said that he would consider his trip to Amsterdam to attend the meeting of the World Council of Churches and the meeting of the executive committee of the Lutheran World Federation here as his furlough. Dr. Harvey D. Hoover is next in line for the furlough, followed by Dr. Ralph D. Leim, both of whom will probably take their furloughs during the coming year. Dr. Wentz will be in Amsterdam from the middle of July to the middle of September. Permission for the trip was granted by the trustees at their meeting.

MACKMEN BEAT FELLER; TAKE TOP POSITION

By JACK HAND
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Give a cheer for 85-year-old Connie Mack and his surprising Philadelphia Athletics. Five straight wins, climaxed by a kayo decision over Bobby Feller, have boosted the A's into the American league lead.

It's difficult to put a finger on the reason for the A's success. Pitching, of course, is bound to be the Athletics' strong point but sore arms and the poor spring form of Bill McCahan and Joe Coleman held them back. Lou Brissie, the brilliant rookie with the injured leg, helped out with two wins and now Dick Fowler seems ready to carry his share of the load.

Fowler worked only two-thirds of an inning on relief before yesterday's 8-5 victory over Cleveland. Arm trouble handicapped him in spring training.

Feller was belted out in the fourth inning, never recovering from a four-run first inning during which Manager Lou Boudreau made two costly errors.

Players Tangle

George Vico, Detroit's rookie first baseman, and Birdie Tebbets, the Boston Red Sox's catcher who once played for the Tigers, staged an impromptu fight to enliven the proceedings at Fenway Park. The two players fell when Tebbets tagged Vico as he ran back toward third base as a squeeze play went awry.

Vico punched Tebbet's mask and Birdie flung it off. Then he threw a punch. After they had been separated and ejected from the game, they scuffled again in the grandstand tunnel to the dressing rooms.

Although the Red Sox knocked out Hal Newhouse in the first inning, they lost the game to Detroit, 8-3.

There was an argument in New York, too, where the St. Louis Browns claimed Bobby Brown's game-winning homer was a foul ball. The homer, perilously close to the right field foul pole, came with a man on in the eighth for a 6-5 Yankee victory.

Second Shoutout

Washington pulled up to the 500 mark by shutting out Chicago for the second night in a row, 5-0, on Early Wynn's three-hit pitching. Wynn hurled hitless ball in the last six frames.

Pittsburgh's six-game win streak was broken in the National league when the New York Giants thumped the Pirates, 9-2. The result left the Bucs in first place only 18 percentage points ahead of the Giants.

All other National league games were washed out—Brooklyn at Chicago, Boston at Cincinnati and a scheduled night meeting of Philadelphia at St. Louis.

Arcadia, Calif., May 7 (AP)—Rodney, a huge four-year-old brown trotter and world record holder, dominates a field of 18 horses named to race tomorrow in the $50,000 Golden West trot at Santa Anita Park. With more than 15,000 fans expected to witness the race, the $50,000 feature tops a card that boasts two other races of national interest.

Ellenville, N. Y., May 7 (AP)—Rocky Graziano was arguing with an old-time boxer who sought to give him some advice. "I can't box," the Rock insisted. "Everytime I try, I get hit with everything in sight. I gotta keep moving in there and giving 'em that left and right." Rocky had just proved that fact to the satisfaction of all observers in his second boxing session in preparation for next month's tussle with Tony Zale. . . . A couple of speedy sparring partners had managed to evade most of his wallops and to cuff him about rather easily. . . . Of course, there's some explanation for that. Graziano has been galloping up and down the mountains around the Nevele Country club for a couple of weeks and is in magnificent physical shape. He also was looking at his rivals with rather magnificent disdain. He knew they couldn't hurt him and that he didn't dare hit them as hard as he could. A little later he'll start punching against light heavyweights or heavies and really can cut loose. Meanwhile, his job is to speed up and sharpen up his punching, which suffered considerably during a ten-month layoff. . . . Dumb Dan Morgan, who always gets in the last word on such matters, summed it up: "He doesn't know the first thing about defensive boxing but he's hitting as hard as ever. He's what I'd call a dangerous catcher."

ENOUGH IS ENOUGH
When the Athletics visited Washington the other day, Connie Mack and Clark Griffith began discussing Bobo Newsom, the much-traveled pitcher. . . . "I thought you were going to sign him again, Griff," Connie commented. . . . "No, no!" Griffith exclaimed. "I just haven't got your patience. I said to myself: 'If he were out Connie Mack in one year, what would he do to me a fifth time?'"

DOT'S ALL BROTHERS
New England's biggest spring sport (apart from the Braves and Red Sox) is guessing what college will land Larry Agganis, Lynn, Mass., schoolboy flash who is shopping and shopped-for. . . . And out in Ann Arbor, Mich., they're wondering how much coaching Benny Oosterbaan will do with the old master, Fritz Crisler, in the background. Remember when Fielding Yost "re-signed" as coach? . . . Charley Trippi, now coaching the U. of Georgia baseball team, is burned up over the ump who forfeited a game to Tennessee because Charley protested a decision too long.

Matchmaker Andy Neiderreiter expects to announce some summer fights for Ebbets Field soon. How about Durocher vs. Stanky?

MACKMEN BEAT FELLER; TAKE TOP POSITION

By JACK HAND

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Give a cheer for 85-year-old Connie Mack and his surprising Philadelphia Athletics. Five straight wins, culminated by a kayo decision over Bobby Feller, have boosted the A's into the American league lead.

It's difficult to put a finger on the reason for the A's success. Pitching, of course, is bound to be the Athletics' strong point but sore arms and the poor spring form of Bill McCahan and Joe Coleman held them back. Lou Brissie, the brilliant rookie with the injured leg, helped out with two wins and now Dick Fowler seems ready to carry his share of the load.

Fowler worked only two-thirds of an inning on relief before yesterday's 8-5 victory over Cleveland. Arm trouble handicapped him in spring training.

Feller was belted out in the fourth inning, never recovering from a four-run first inning during which Manager Lou Boudreau made two costly errors.

Players Tangle

George Vico, Detroit's rookie first baseman, and Birdie Tebbets, the Boston Red Sox's catcher who once played for the Tigers, staged an impromptu fight to enliven the proceedings at Fenway Park. The two players fell when Tebbets tagged Vico as he ran back toward third base as a squeeze play went awry.

Vico punched Tebbets' mask and Birdie flung it off. Then he threw a punch. After they had been separated and ejected from the game, they scuffled again in the grandstand tunnel to the dressing rooms.

Although the Red Sox knocked out Hal Newhouser in the first inning, they lost the game to Detroit, 8-3.

There was an argument in New York, too, where the St. Louis Browns claimed Bobby Brown's game-winning homer was a foul ball. The homer, perilously close to the right field foul pole, came with a man on in the eighth for a 6-5 Yankee victory.

Second Shutout

Washington pulled up to the .500 mark by shutting out Chicago for the second night in a row, 5-0, on Early Wynn's three-hit pitching. Wynn hurled hitless ball in the last six frames.

Pittsburgh's six-game win streak was broken in the National League when the New York Giants thumped the Pirates, 9-2. The result left the Bucs in first place only 18 percentage points ahead of the Giants.

All other National League games were washed out—Brooklyn at Chicago, Boston at Cincinnati and a scheduled night meeting of Philadelphia at St. Louis.

Aradia, Calif., May 7 (AP)—Rodney, a huge four-year-old brown trotter and world record holder, dominates a field of 18 horses named to race tomorrow in the $50,000 Golden West trot at Santa Anita Park. With more than 15,000 fans expected to witness the race, the $50,000 feature tops a card that boasts two other races of national interest.

South Penn Track Records

Gettysburg high school, title winners in 12 of the 13 track meets held by the South Penn conference, holds six of the conference records which schoolboys will attempt to crack when they tangle on the high school field Saturday afternoon at 1 o'clock in the 14th annual affair. The Maroon 880-yard relay team of 1942 tied the Waynesboro team of 1941 for the record in that event.

Nearly 100 athletes from Carlisle, Chambersburg and Gettysburg will vie for honors here on Saturday.

The conference records follow: 100-Yard Dash — Trostle, Gettysburg (1934); Shoop, Gettysburg (1941). Time 10.1 seconds.

220-Yard Dash — John Shue, Hanover (1943). Time 22.7 seconds.

440-Yard Run — Wayne Bucher, Gettysburg (1940). Time 52.3 seconds.

880-Yard Run — Max Fissel, Gettysburg (1941). Time 2:05.4.

1 Mile Run — Griest, Carlisle (1943). Time 4:44.5.

110 Low Hurdles — West, Waynesboro (1941). Time 13 seconds.

880-Yard Relay — Waynesboro (Brightful, West, Coffman, Johnson) (1941); Gettysburg (S. Stanton, Epley, Kinneman, A. Stanton) (1942). Time 1:37.5.

1 Mile Relay — Shippensburg (1932). Time 3:37.8.

High Jump — John Davis, Hanover (1942). Height 5 feet, 8 inches.

Broad Jump — Alspaugh, Carlisle (1940). Distance 21 feet, 4 inches.

Today's Talk

EXPECTANCY

I once heard of a minister who went every Saturday to one of his parishioners and borrowed ten dollars — promptly returning it on the following Monday morning. The curiosity of the minister's friend being aroused, he asked why it was that he had to borrow this ten dollars every week. The minister replied that he seemed to deliver a better sermon with that money in his pocket!

To many this may appear strange, but many years ago, at least in the small town, few ministers ever had so much as even ten dollars in their pocket, come Sunday morning! I know, for my father was a minister. We all work better with a little assurance or hope wrapped up or tucked away in some manner to serve us in our daily climb.

Our whole hope of heaven is centered in this one word of Expectancy. We believe. We have faith. We look to God, through Jesus Christ, and through every evidence of beauty and marvelous creation upon this earth. And so we look beyond our own limited eyesight and pray for spiritual vision to lead us into a new understanding of life here — and beyond.

All through my early years in school I carried that little packet of Expectancy, in my knapsack, as it were. Looking forward, hoping, reaching. It gave me no incentive and ambition, made me curious and adventurous. It made me dismiss all appearance of failure. It was a light in my heart! I am sure that this experience of mine is that of most readers of these talks.

The agnostic blots out his own vision, whereas the man or woman of faith sees afar, and journeys toward it. The agnostic would never have gone forward and created the marvelous, almost miraculous, things that we have today to add to our comfort and knowledge, and ease of life. It's "faith," the substance of things hoped for," that drives all mankind forward. It's fear that would tear it all apart, leaving the world in chaos!

"Only that day dawns to which we are awake," said Thoreau. It's this expectancy in our heart that gives us our sense of consciousness — that awakens us to every dawn.

Tomorrow Mr. Adams will talk on the subject: "Communications."

EZRA LEADS A RELIGIOUS REVIVAL

By Rev. Howard R. Gold, D.D.
Margaret C. Gold

Nehemiah 8:1-3, 5-6, 8; 10:28-32.
Memory selection: Be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only. James 1:22.

In the lesson for this week our attention is focused on a vital period in Hebrew history, the second half of the Restoration Period which is considered the most important. It embraces the reading of the Law to the people and the renewed devotion to its requirements. Especially interesting is the activity of Ezra, leader in the revival.

Ezra, accompanied by a number of exiles, returned to Jerusalem from Babylon in the year 457 B. C. His first duty was to beautify the rebuilt temple and restore the customary services. Some time later he rebuilt the walls of the city in the remarkably short time of 52 days. These two men, Ezra the priest and scribe, and Nehemiah, the layman and governor, labored together to restore the former glory of Jerusalem. But stone and mortar were not sufficient to renew the spiritual life that once quickened the pulse of the Holy City. There must be a new consecration and devotion to the Lord's will for his people.

The Law Read
Fortunately a copy of God's law as given to Moses was found. This, so Ezra decided, must be read and explained to all the people. An appropriate time was at hand. The city walls were completed and the time for observing the Feast of Tabernacles was near. The people gathered "before the water gate" of the city and requested Ezra to read them the law of Moses. This was the opportune moment. Men, women and children composed the congregation (too large for the temple) and heard the law read from morning until noon. Ezra, flanked by other priests, was stationed

This Vacation Church school will open Monday, June 14 and close Sunday night, June 27. The school will be open to all children and young people from three to 19 years of age.

A faculty of 10 teachers and about an equal number of young people as assistants have been selected and preparations are being made for around 150 attendance. The teachers will be dedicated and publicly installed at a union service Sunday night, June 13, at 7:30 p. m.

2,300,000 motor vehicle registrations.

The lists are used by advertising firms, motor clubs and others interested in gaining the ear of the motorist as a prospective buyer.

The state revenue department recently received $15,833 for the 1948 registrations and will likely get another few hundred dollars for title transfers in the current license period.

The Pennsylvania Motor List company, Harrisburg, is the current holder of the list after successfully bidding $7.15 for each 1,000 names of registrants and $1.43 for each 1,000 transfers.

The Motor List concern was organized more than 20 years ago by an energetic former employee in the state highways department for the specific purpose of re-selling the list

Today's Talk

EXPECTANCY

I once heard of a minister who went every Saturday to one of his parishioners and borrowed ten dollars — promptly returning it on the following Monday morning. The curiosity of the minister's friend being aroused, he asked why it was that he had to borrow this ten dollars every week. The minister replied that he seemed to deliver a better sermon with that money in his pocket!

To many this may appear strange, but many years ago, at least in the small town, few ministers ever had so much as even ten dollars in their pocket, come Sunday morning! I know, for my father was a minister. We all work better with a little assurance or hope wrapped up or tucked away in some manner to serve us in our daily climb.

Our whole hope of heaven is centered in this one word of Expectancy. We believe. We have faith. We look to God, through Jesus Christ, and through every evidence of beauty and marvelous creation upon this earth. And so we look before our own limited eyesight and pray for spiritual vision to lead us into a new understanding of life here — and beyond.

All through my early years in school I carried that little packet of Expectancy, in my knapsack, as it were. Looking forward, hoping, reaching. It gave to me incentive and ambition, made me curious and adventurous. It made me dismiss all appearance of failure. It was a light in my heart! I am sure that this experience of mine is that of most readers of these talks.

The agnostic blots out his own vision, whereas the man or woman of faith sees afar, and journeys toward it. The agnostics would never have gone forward and created the marvelous, almost miraculous, things that we have today to add to our comfort and knowledge, and ease of life. It's "faith," the substance of things hoped for, that drives all mankind forward. It's fear that would tear it all apart, leaving the world in chaos!

"Only that day dawns to which we are awake," said Thoreau. It's this expectancy in our heart that gives us our sense of consciousness — that awakens us to every dawn.

Tomorrow Mr. Adams will talk on the subject: "Communications."

EZRA LEADS A RELIGIOUS REVIVAL

By Rev. Howard E. Gold, D.D.
Margaret C. Gold
Nehemiah 8:1-3, 5-6, 8; 10:28-32
Memory selection: Be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only. James 1:22.

In the lesson for this week our attention is focused on a vital period in Hebrew history, the second half of the Restoration Period which is considered the most important. It embraces the reading of the Law to the people and the renewed devotion to its requirements. Especially interesting is the life activity of Ezra, leader in the revival.

Ezra, accompanied by a number of exiles, returned to Jerusalem from Babylon in the year 457 B. C. His first duty was to beautify the rebuilt temple and restore the customary services. Some time later came Nehemiah who rebuilt the walls of the city in the remarkably short time of 52 days. These two men, Ezra the priest and scribe, and Nehemiah, the layman and governor, labored together to restore the former glory of Jerusalem. But stone and mortar were not sufficient to renew the spiritual life that once quickened the pulse of the Holy City. There must be a new consecration and devotion to the Lord's will for his people.

The Law Read
Fortunately a copy of God's law as given to Moses was found. This, so Ezra decided, must be read and explained to all the people. An appropriate time was at hand. The city walls were completed and the time for observing the Feast of Tabernacles was near. The people gathered "before the water gate" of the city and requested Ezra to read them the law of Moses. This was the opportune moment. Men, women and children composed the congregation (too large for the temple) and heard the law read from morning until noon. Ezra, flanked by other priests, was stationed on a wooden platform or pulpit above the people. He read portions of the law and the priests assisted in making it plain to the people. "And the ears of all the people were attentive unto the book of the law." The law was accepted and pledges were made to obey it.

How The Revival Began
At last, after many years of neglect, God's own word was once more the true guide for worship and standard for right living. It must be noted that this revival of spirituality began in the heart of one man. In Ezra 7:10 we read: "For Ezra had prepared his heart to seek the law of the Lord and to do it."

and to teach in Israel statutes and judgments." That was while the priest was still in Babylon. There you have the way of reforms as seen again and again in history. A man becomes conscious of a compelling truth, acts in accordance with it, and transmits his convictions to others. The contagion spreads and a religious awakening or revival is the result.

Preaching and Teaching
Note that this revival was a preaching and a teaching mission. There was emotion and instruction. Ezra himself was an educated man, more of a teacher than a preacher. By his side on the raised platform were the priests interpreting what was read. The people were aroused, their feelings stirred. They were also given knowledge and understanding. The two — emotion and understanding led them to "curse" their former neglect of God's will and to determine "to walk in God's law." Present day reforms (and they are needed), if they are to be effective must proceed in the same manner — stimulation and education.

Applying The Law
The hearts of the people having been touched they were ready for practical reforms. Out of this "reading of the law" came a new way of life for the Hebrews. Observance of the Sabbath Day was restored — no more selling or buying on that day. The gates of the city were guarded against merchants. The seventh year, the sabbatical, was again observed when the soil was not cultivated and when the collection of any debts had to wait till the following year. The system of tithing was renewed. The great festivals, long neglected, would be solemnized again. Inter-marrying with foreign tribes was strictly forbidden. That had been one of the chief causes of their former lapses into idolatry.

The text tells of "ordinances" from which we conclude that new statutes required by new conditions were enacted. It would appear that the counsel given by James centuries later was put into effect here: "Be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only." We know that lapses occurred but a good beginning was made. This reading of the law ended on a joyful note. Upon hearing it, the people had wept because they had not kept it, so they were urged by Ezra and others: "Mourn not, nor weep. . . go your way, eat the fat, and drink the sweet, and send portions to them who have nothing prepared; . . . for the joy of the Lord is your strength."

SITUATION IN KOREA GROWING MORE CRITICAL

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(AP Foreign Affairs Analyst)

We shouldn't allow ourselves to be lulled into any feeling of false security because the Communist offensive in Europe has been slowed down.

It's important to remember that we are not fighting a one-front conflict, but that the Bolsheviks are striking on many fronts. One of the most dangerous situations is in the Orient, where the Reds are pushing their cold-war cautiously but persistently.

Early this week Lt. General John R. Hodge, U. S. military commander in South Korea, declared that a Communist government of all Korea undoubtedly would be announced soon by "North Korean stooges of Soviet masters." The background for that grim prediction was this:

UN Group Barred

The Russians, who occupy the northern half of the country, recently called a "unity conference" to be held in their territory to frame a constitution for a government comprising both Northern and Southern Korea. Delegates from the American sector were invited to attend. A nation-wide election leading to a unified government had been proposed by the United Nations, but the Russians rejected this and refused to allow a U.N. commission to enter their zone. Meanwhile an election was scheduled to be held under American sponsorship in the southern zone on May 10 to create a new government.

Well, two Southern Koreans attended the Soviet parley, which General Hodge said ought to be called the All-Korean Communist conference instead of the Unity Conference. These volunteer delegates from the south were Kim Koo, an avowed Rightist, and Kimm Kiu-Sic who called himself a Liberal Anti-Communist. General Hodge said they had fallen into a Communist trap.

Yesterday Kimm and Kim returned from the "unity conference," which had adopted the constitution for a government to comprise all Korea. And the two came back declaring that their trip "fulfilled the expectation of a large number of fellow countrymen who are longing for the unification of our fatherland." Kimm Kiu-Sic was loud in his praise of Russian rule in the north, asserting that conditions there are much better than in the south.

Will Stay Divided

General Hodge made no comment on this unexpected pro-Red clout-burst. The development can hardly be favorable to the election next week. While the southern zone is said to be predominantly anti-Communist, these statements by Messrs. Kimm and Kim are bound to add fuel to the fire already started by Red agitators in the American sector.

So far as one can forecast at this writing, the situation boils down to this: Since there isn't the slightest indication that either the Russians or the Americans will withdraw from Korea, the little country must remain divided, as is happening in Germany. This means that the occupying powers will have to maintain troops there indefinitely.

EXECUTE 18 IN ATHENS TODAY

Athens, May 7 (AP)—Eighteen more persons convicted of murder were reported executed this morning at Aegina prison just outside of Athens.

Nineteen were executed there yesterday. Thirteen others executed at Athens and 11 at Salonika yesterday brought to 61 the total number of executions within 36 hours and to 213 this week. Most were convicted of murder during Leftist uprisings in 1944.

The British Embassy said British Ambassador Sir Clifford Norton had sent a note to Vice Premier Constantin Tsaldaris asking "details and explanations" of the recent large-scale executions. Norton called yesterday on Michael Mavrocordato, under-secretary to the premier, in connection with the executions.

Both Tsaldaris and Premier Theodoros Sophoulis said the British Embassy had not lodged a protest.

The premier, a liberal, and Tsaldaris, a populist, now are busy reshuffling the cabinet. The names of four new liberal ministers in the liberal-populist coalition cabinet were announced this morning. Names of the new populist members have not yet been agreed upon.

Sophoulis said the posts of the new men will not be announced until a few moments before they are sworn into office.

ISSUE WARRANTS

Philadelphia, May 7 (AP)—Warrants for the arrest of five Philadelphia book dealers were issued by Magistrate Thomas A. Connor yesterday in connection with the alleged sale of salacious literature. The warrants named Horace Gordon, Joseph Blumfield, Samuel Masover, Charles Praisman and M. Fliegenbaum.

Visiting Nurse

by Kathleen Harris

Chapter 1

"Why, this girl is a nurse!" Those were the first words Hildred heard when she regained consciousness.

"What would a nurse be doing out here? What could have happened to have made her come tumbling out of the brush like that? And why, in heaven's name, would anyone want to shoot at her?"

Hildred decided, at this point, it was time to move in spite of being so comfortable. She fluttered the lashes that were so unbelievably long, stirred slightly.

Two pairs of firm, strong hands instantly proceeded to hold her down.

"Lie still!" the authoritative voice commanded in such a manner as to show it was used to having all orders obeyed without question.

"Better take it easy, Miss!" another but rougher one admonished. "That's a nasty scratch you got."

"If you gentlemen would kindly take your hands off me and allow me to get up," Hildred said in a voice she hoped was flavored with a nice spice of irony. "I might attempt to solve the riddle for you."

"We are only trying to help you," "Sure, Miss, you're badly shook up! The bullet must just grazed your skin. You may have what is called shock."

Hildred was willing to admit she might, as remembrance came flooding back. "I guess I was scared," she admitted. "You see he said if I didn't stay away and let Jimmy alone he would shoot me."

"Just as I thought," the ungentlemanly one nodded his head significantly. "The younger and prettier they are the more trouble they get in."

"Undoubtedly." The gentleman's tone was so convinced—and so disapproving. "Let us hope," he added, "that this will be a lesson. To let Jimmy alone in the future."

"Why, you . . . you . . . let me get up, clear up on my feet!" Hildred struggled wildly, as again two pair of strong hands strove to keep her down.

"You may get up. Though not so abruptly." There was a slight smile on the countenance of the so-perfect gentleman. "If we had not taken this detour I fear you would have lost considerable blood. As it is we shall be obliged to give you a lift back into town."

"I wouldn't accept a lift from you under any circumstances!" Hildred tossed her head angrily.

"Now, Miss, you don't mean that!" The other man, she saw now, wore the uniform of a chauffeur. "We'd be mighty pleased to take you wherever you're headed for. Besides, it'd be a lot safer."

"I'm not so sure of that," Hildred returned.

"You will be perfectly safe, I assure you." He had not missed the implication in her words. "As Robin said, it will be a pleasure to take you wherever you wish to go. Robin has been in my employ for eight years; he is a most respectable character. And I am confident he will vouch for me, if you insist. My name, by the way, is Lucien Lanier."

"Here we are!" Robin beamed on her. He assisted her with the most elaborate care and caution. "Everything all right?" the chauffeur added, anxiously almost pleadingly.

"Everything is dandy," Hildred assured him. "Except I don't believe I've thanked you yet, Robin, for all you've done for me. This is a perfectly beautiful bandage." She indicated the wrapping about her upper arm.

"It was a pleasure. Miss—a rare pleasure!" Robin assured her, fervently.

Lanier climbed in to sit down in the tonneau beside Hildred. It was high time she explained, she thought.

"Jimmy is twelve years old," she began, as the big car purrrd down the long, winding stretch of road. "It was his grandfather who took a shot at me. He had warned me he would, if I came back again."

"Then why on earth did you go back?"

"I had to," Hildred explained simply, if not too lucidly. "Jimmy is such a dear little boy—and smart, too. But his grandfather—he has no one else—works him so hard, and he won't let Jimmy go to school except when the authorities come after him, and he even beats the little fellow—I've seen the marks on his poor little crippled body."

"Crippled!" There was slight disbelief in this exclamation.

"Jimmy was born with a severe handicap," she tried again. "One leg shorter, the foot badly twisted. It could have been corrected if taken in time. I'm a county nurse. Often we cannot do much, but we usually can do a little. Unless," she finished ruefully, "we meet such strong resistance as Jimmy's grandfather put up today."

"Why didn't you send someone else, Miss . . . I am sorry but I do not know your name."

"Hildred McNaughten," she made it as brief as he had. "There is no one else to send."

She was glad that they had reached the edge of town and would soon be at her destination.

She said, "I'd like to be put out at the next corner, please. And, even if you won't think me ungrateful. Why, I owe you my very life, Mr. Lanier!"

"Hardly that. Yet, perhaps, I shall claim some small portion of your life, Miss McNaughten."

She thought that an odd thing for him to say. She did not exactly like his saying it. "I never forget an obligation; I shan't forget this one. And now if you'll kindly have Robin pull up—this is the place. The clinic is on the second floor of that corner building."

"You know," he said, with a smile that was almost friendly, "you really ought to let us take you to a good doctor or a hospital. That wound of yours should be properly dressed."

"We have a very good doctor at the clinic." It was a good thing Randy—Doctor Randolph Baird, head of the clinic—had not heard that! "My arm will be taken care of, I assure you."

"Well then, suppose you have dinner with me tomorrow evening? So that I may see for myself that that arm of yours has been properly looked after. I'll have Robin call for you, here at the clinic around five-thirty."

"Well, I . . . I guess that will be all right." Her acceptance was none too enthusiastic or even gracious.

Apparently it not only satisfied her escort, it seemed to amuse him.

"I assure you," he bowed gravely in taking his departure, "that you will be perfectly safe—if that is what is bothering you, Miss McNaughten."

Chapter 2

Doctor Randolph Baird took excellent care of Hildred's arm, as she assured Lucien Lanier he would. He, Doctor Baird, also reacted exactly as she had known he would.

Randy's reaction had been that Hildred—or "Hildy," as he always called her—should have known better than to have got herself into trouble. In fact he scolded her soundly all the time he was washing and dressing her wound.

"I hate to have Jimmy put in a home," Hildred returned, much as she had in trying to explain to Mr. Lanier.

"You are taking a sentimental attitude," Randy observed, scowling darkly. "The boy will have to be placed in an institution eventually. Best place for him."

"I might have been killed Randy. You don't appear to take that into consideration. It was mighty lucky that those two men happened to come along just when they did." She had told him, but only briefly, that two men had come to her rescue and driven her back into town. "Well you were not. Yes, that was lucky." And then he said the only thing that betrayed any personal feeling on his part, "Don't go back there again. Under any circumstances."

She said, "I won't go back again. You need not worry, Randy." She knew he would miss the elaborate sarcasm behind those last words. "I'll go get out of my uniform," she said, using her professional tone.

"Do that," Randy returned, as he had every time for nearly six hundred and some days. "I'll be ready shortly. Just a few things to go over. Meet you downstairs." Which meant, as always, that she should wait in his coupe until he joined her, as he invariably drove her home.

"I'm not going home," Hildred said, for the first time in those six hundred odd times "I'll see you tomorrow morning, Randy. Good night."

She might have been surprised, once more, could she have seen Doctor Randolph Baird staring after her with that perplexed, almost startled look that is often referred to as being "struck speechless."

Since she had told Randy she was not going home she could not very well go there. So she decided, that she would do a bit of shopping.

She turned into a smart little French shop that displayed only one dress and one hat in its window. She knew each item, as well as the others inside, would be well out of reach of her pocketbook. But that was why she chose this particular shop.

"Something in a dinner dress," she said carelessly to the saleslady who came to greet her. You might have supposed she bought a dinner dress every day—at least she hoped she had given that impression.

The dress was so simple and yet so perfect that Hildred knew it was what she wanted—the dress she simply must have—the moment the saleslady brought it back to hold it up silently before her.

"I'll take it!" Hildred finished the whole gamut of emotions with one last final triumphant flash of daring, much like her defiant toss of head. "How much is it please?" she asked indifferently, if with inward trepidation.

"Only seventy-five dollars, Madame," the saleslady purred in such a way as to intimate that that was practically giving the garment away as a present.

Hildred said, "I'll have to write a check, if you'll get a pen, please." She said it as if used to writing such checks for such expenditures every day. It would take her a year, or six months at the least, to make up that deficiency drawn from her savings account. But it was the first time in over two years she ever had drawn anything for purely selfish—and therefore wicked, in Randy's eyes—purposes.

Funny, how she measured everything by Randy's yardsticks; she had not realized until today how often she did that in regard to everything she did and said and thought.

When she came out of the shop, Hildred decided to postpone going home and to see where her feet, and whatever impulses were guiding them on, should direct her. They hesitated, though not for long, outside the window of another small, exclusive establishment devoted to the art of beauty.

"I'd like to have a shampoo and a set," Hildred hoped that was what it was called—she always washed her own hair because of its natural wave and that also natural economy—"and well, whatever else goes with it," she told the girl behind the appointment desk, with a grand flourish made with a careless little gesture of one hand.

When it was all over she was almost afraid to look at herself in the mirror.

"If I may say so, Mademoiselle, she is a different person! Before you were a very pretty jeune fille. Now you are a truly beautiful woman."

Jews Claiming New Gains in N. Palestine

Haifa, Palestine, May 7 (AP)—Jews claimed today to have seized new territory from northern Palestine Arabs in the waning days of Great Britain's mandate over the Holy Land.

British rule is to end at midnight (6 p. m., Eastern Standard Time) a week from tonight. Though the United Nations lately has shied away from its partition plan of last November, the Jews are setting up a government to take over then in the parts they would get under the plan.

The Jewish agency's militia, Hagannah, said last night its men had captured two Arab villages between Nazareth and Haifa, and the Sea of Galilee, and had taken a hill overlooking Safad, mainly Arab city about 10 miles north of the sea.

The villages were Sejera and Arab El Edna. Sejera is west of seaside Tiberias, which Hagannah captured a few weeks ago. Arab El Edna is near 1,929-foot Jebel Et Tur (Mount Tabor), traditional site of Christ's transfiguration.

Hagannah said two Jews were killed and nine wounded and 20 Arabs were left dead in Sejera, and two other Jews died and 16 were wounded in the attack on Arab El Edna, where Arab losses were believed high.

The British army in Haifa said 70 new cases of typhoid were reported yesterday in Acre to the north, crowded with Arab refugees from Haifa. The army said all persons in Acre were being inoculated.

In Tel Aviv, Hagannah said without confirmation that Lebanese troops shelled the Jewish settlement of Ramat Naftali in northern Palestine before dawn yesterday. Newspapers there said Jews holding Yehudia near Lydda airport, beat off a counterattack by four armored vehicles of the Trans-Jordan Arab legion, part of which is in Palestine to help the British in police work.

NOT INTERESTED, P.O. DECLARES

Washington, May 7 (AP)—The post office department adopted an "Oh, no!" attitude today toward suggestions that it take over the losing "small package" business of the Railway Express agency.

The trouble is the post office hasn't found the handling of small packages very profitable either.

Postmaster General Jesse M. McDonald noted that the cost of handling parcel post this year will run to about $50,000,000 more than the parcel postage sold. He added to a reporter:

"We have already outgrown our the United States, Belgian and French consuls general expected to undertake new talks with three Arab negotiators today in Jericho aimed at a cease-fire for the whole city. The commission was set up by the Security Council.

Sir Alan Gordon Cunningham, British high commissioner, was trying to arrange a truce over Jerusalem's old walled city and its Christian, Jewish and Moslem shrines by request of the U.N. trusteeship council.

SITUATION IN KOREA GROWING MORE CRITICAL

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(AP Foreign Affairs Analyst)

We shouldn't allow ourselves to be lulled into any feeling of false security because the Communist offensive in Europe has been slowed down.

It's important to remember that we are not fighting a one-front conflict, but that the Bolsheviks are striking on many fronts. One of the most dangerous situations is in the Orient, where the Reds are pushing their cold-war cautiously but persistently.

Early this week Lt. General John R. Hodge, U. S. military commander in South Korea, declared that a Communist government of all Korea undoubtedly would be announced soon by "North Korean stooges of Soviet masters." The background for that grim prediction was this:

UN Group Barred

The Russians, who occupy the northern half of the country, recently called a "unity conference" to be held in their territory to frame a constitution for a government comprising both Northern and Southern Korea. Delegates from the American sector were invited to attend. A nation-wide election leading to a unified government had been proposed by the United Nations, but the Russians rejected this and refused to allow a U.N. commission to enter their zone. Meanwhile an election was scheduled to be held under American sponsorship in the southern zone on May 10 to create a new government.

Well, two Southern Koreans attended the Soviet parley, which General Hodge said ought to be called the All-Korean Communist conference instead of the Unity Conference. These volunteer delegates from the south were Kim Koo, an avowed Rightist, and Kim Kiu-Sic, who called himself a Liberal Anti-Communist. General Hodge said they had fallen into a Communist trap.

Yesterday Kimm and Kim returned from the "unity conference," which had adopted the constitution for a government to comprise all Korea. And the two came back declaring that their trip "fulfilled the expectation of a large number of fellow countrymen who are longing for the unification of our fatherland." Kim Kiu-Sic was loud in his praise of Russian rule in the north, asserting that conditions there are much better than in the south.

Will Stay Divided
General Hodge made no comment on this unexpected pro-Red cloud-burst. The development can hardly be favorable to the election next week. While the southern zone is said to be predominantly anti-Communist, these statements by Messrs. Kimm and Kim are bound to add fuel to the fire already started by Red agitators in the American sector.

So far as one can forecast at this writing, the situation boils down to this: Since there isn't the slightest indication that either the Russians or the Americans will withdraw from Korea, the little country must remain divided, as is happening in Germany. This means that the occupying powers will have to maintain troops there indefinitely.

EXECUTE 18 IN ATHENS TODAY

Athens, May 7 (AP)—Eighteen more persons convicted of murder were reported executed this morning at Aegina prison just outside of Athens. Nineteen were executed yesterday. Thirteen others executed at Athens and 11 at Salonika yesterday brought to 61 the total number of executions within 36 hours and to 213 this week. Most were convicted of murder during leftist uprisings in 1944.

The British Embassy said British Ambassador Sir Clifford Norton had sent a note to Vice Premier Constantin Tsaldaris asking "details and explanations" of the recent large-scale executions. Norton called yesterday on Michael Mavrocordato, under-secretary to the premier, in connection with the executions.

Both Tsaldaris and Premier Themisokles Sophoulis said the British Embassy had not lodged a protest. The premier, a liberal, and Tsaldaris, a populist, now are busy reshuffling the cabinet. The names of four new liberal ministers in the liberal-populist coalition cabinet were announced this morning. Names of the new populist members have not yet been agreed upon. Sophoulis said the posts of the new men will not be announced until a few moments before they are sworn into office.

ISSUE WARRANTS

Philadelphia, May 7 (AP)—Warrants for the arrest of five Philadelphia book dealers were issued by Magistrate Thomas A. Connor yesterday in connection with the alleged sale of salacious literature. The warrants named Horace Gordon, Joseph Blumfeld, Samuel Masover, Charles Fraissman and M. Plegenbaum.

About 75 million acres in the United States are desert, swamp, rocky or barren land.

Visiting Nurse

by Kathleen Harris

Chapter 1

"Why, this girl is a nurse!" Those were the first words Hildred heard when she regained consciousness.

"What would a nurse be doing out here? What could have happened to have made her come tumbling out of the brush like that? And why, in heaven's name, would anyone want to shoot at her?"

Hildred decided, at this point, it was time to move in spite of being so comfortable. She fluttered the lashes that were so unbelievably long, stirred slightly.

Two pairs of firm, strong hands instantly proceeded to hold her down.

"Lie still!" the authoritative voice commanded in such a manner as to show it was used to having all orders obeyed without question.

"Better take it easy, Miss!" another but rougher one admonished. "That's a nasty scratch you got."

"If you gentlemen would kindly take your hands off me and allow me to get up," Hildred said in a voice she hoped was flavored with a nice spice of irony. "I might attempt to solve the riddle for you."

"We are only trying to help you." "Sure, Miss, you're badly shook up! The bullet must just grazed your skin. You may have what is called shock."

Hildred was willing to admit she might, as remembrance came flooding back. "I guess I was scared," she admitted. "You see he said 'I didn't stay away and let Jimmy alone he would shoot me.'"

"Just as I thought sir," the ungentlemanly one nodded his head significantly. "The younger and prettier they are the more trouble they get in."

"Undoubtedly." The gentleman's tone was so convinced—and so disapproving. "Let us hope," he added, "that this will be a lesson. To let Jimmy alone in the future."

"Why, you . . . you . . . let me get up, clear up on my feet!" Hildred struggled wildly, as again two pair of strong hands strove to keep her down.

"You may get up. Though not so abruptly." There was a slight smile on the countenance of the so-perfect gentleman. "If we had not taken this detour I fear you would have lost considerable blood. As it is we shall be obliged to give you a lift back into town."

"I wouldn't accept a lift from you under any circumstances!" Hildred tossed her head angrily.

"Now, Miss, you don't mean that!" The other man, she saw now, wore the uniform of a chauffeur. "We'd be mighty pleased to take you wherever you're headed for. Besides, it'd be a lot safer."

"I'm not so sure of that," Hildred returned. "You will be perfectly safe, I assure you." He had not missed the implication in her words. "As Robin said, it will be a pleasure to take you wherever you wish to go. Robin has been in my employ for eight years; he is a most respectable character. And I am confident he will vouch for me. If you insist, my name, by the way, is Lucien Lanier."

"Here we are!" Robin beamed on her. He assisted her with the most elaborate care and caution. "Everything all right?" the chauffeur added, anxiously almost pleadingly.

"Everything is dandy," Hildred assured him. "Except I don't believe I've thanked you yet, Robin, for all you've done for me. This is a perfectly beautiful bandage." She indicated the wrapping about her upper arm.

"It was a pleasure, Miss—a rare pleasure!" Robin assured her, fervently.

Lanier climbed in to sit down in the tonneau beside Hildred. It was high time she explained, she thought.

"Jimmy is twelve years old," she began, as the big car purrrd down the long, winding stretch of road.

"It was his grandfather who took a shot at me. He had warned me he would, if I came back again."

"Then why on earth did you go back?"

"I had to," Hildred explained simply, if not too lucidly. "Jimmy is such a dear little boy—and smart, too. But his grandfather—he has no one else—works him so hard, and he won't let Jimmy go to school except when the authorities come after him, and he even beats the little fellow—I've seen the marks on his poor little crippled body."

"Crippled?" There was slight disbelief in this exclamation.

"Jimmy was born with a severe handicap," she tried again. "One leg shorter, the foot badly twisted. It could have been corrected if taken in time. I'm a county nurse. Often we cannot do much, but we usually can do a little. Unless," she finished ruefully, "we meet such strong resistance as Jimmy's grandfather put up today."

"Why didn't you send someone else, Miss . . . I am sorry but I do not know your name."

"Hildred McNaughton," she made it as brief as he had. "There is no one else to send."

She was glad that they had reached the edge of town and would soon be at her destination.

She said, "I'd like to be put out at the next corner, please. And even if you don't want my thanks—I hope you won't think me ungrateful. Why, I owe you my very life, Mr. Lanier!"

"Hardly that. Yet perhaps I shall claim some small portion of your life, Miss McNaughton."

She thought that an odd thing for him to say. She did not exactly like his saying it. "I never forget an obligation; I shan't forget this one. And now if you'll kindly have Robin pull up—this is the place. The clinic is on the second floor of that corner building."

"You know," he said, with a smile that was almost friendly, "you really ought to let us take you to a good doctor or a hospital. That wound of yours should be properly dressed."

"We have a very good doctor at the clinic." It was a good thing, Randy—Doctor Randolph Baird, head of the clinic—had not heard that! "My arm will be taken care of, I assure you."

"Well then, suppose you have dinner with me tomorrow evening? So that I may see for myself that that arm of yours has been properly looked after—I'll have Robin call for you, here at the clinic around five-thirty."

"Well, I . . . I guess that will be all right." Her acceptance was none too enthusiastic or even gracious.

Apparently it not only satisfied her escort, it seemed to amuse him.

"I assure you," he bowed gravely in taking his departure, "that you will be perfectly safe—if that is what is bothering you, Miss McNaughton."

Chapter 2

Doctor Randolph Baird took excellent care of Hildred's arm, as she assured Lucien Lanier he would. He, Doctor Baird, also reacted exactly as she had known he would.

Randy's reaction had been that Hildred—or "Hildy," as he always called her—should have known better than to have got herself into trouble. In fact he scolded her soundly all the time he was washing and dressing her wound.

"I hate to have Jimmy put in a home," Hildred returned, much as she had in trying to explain to Mr. Lanier.

"You are taking a sentimental attitude," Randy observed, scowling darkly. "The boy will have to be placed in an institution eventually. Best place for him."

"I might have been killed Randy. You don't appear to take that into consideration. It was mighty lucky that those two men happened to come along just when they did." She had told him, but only briefly, that two men had come to her rescue and driven her back into town. "Well you were not. Yes, that was lucky."

And then he said the only thing that betrayed any personal feeling on his part, "Don't go back there again. Under any circumstances."

She said, "I won't go back again. You need not worry, Randy." She knew he would miss the elaborate sarcasm behind those last words.

"I'll get out of my uniform," she said, using her professional tone.

"Do that," Randy returned, as he had every time for nearly six hundred and some days. "I'll be ready shortly, just a few things to go over. Meet you downstairs." Which meant, as always, that she should wait in his coupe until he joined her, as he invariably drove her home.

"I'm not going home," Hildred said, for the first time in those six hundred odd times "I'll see you tomorrow morning, Randy. Good night."

She might have been surprised, once more, could she have seen Doctor Randolph Baird staring after her with that perplexed, almost startled look that is often referred to as being "struck speechless."

Since she had told Randy she was not going home she could not very well go there. So she decided, that she would do a bit of shopping.

She turned into a smart little French shop that displayed only one dress and one hat in its window. She knew each item, as well as the others inside, would be well out of reach of her pocketbook. But that was why she chose this particular shop.

"Something in a dinner dress," she said carelessly to the saleslady who came to greet her. You might have supposed she bought a dinner dress every day—at least she hoped she had given that impression.

The dress was so simple and yet

so perfect that Hildred knew it was what she wanted—the dress she simply must have—the moment the saleslady brought it back to hold it up silently before her.

"I'll take it!" Hildred finished the whole gamut of emotions with one last final triumphant flash of daring, much like her defiant toss of head. "How much is it please?" she asked indifferently, if with inward trepidation.

"Only seventy-five dollars, Madame," the saleslady purred in such a way as to intimate that that was practically giving the garment away as a present.

Hildred said, "I'll have to write a check, if you'll get a pen, please." She said it as if used to writing such checks for such expenditures every day. It would take her a year, or six months at the least, to make up that deficiency drawn from her savings account. But it was the first time in over two years she ever had drawn anything for purely selfish—and therefore wicked, in Randy's eyes—purposes.

Funny, how she measured everything by Randy's yardsticks; she had not realized until today how often she did that in regard to everything she did and said and thought.

When she came out of the shop, Hildred decided to postpone going home and to see where her feet, and whatever impulses were guiding them on, should direct her. They hesitated, though not for long, outside the window of another small, exclusive establishment devoted to the art of beauty.

"I'd like to have a shampoo and a set," Hildred hoped that was what it was called—she always washed her own hair because of its natural wave and that also natural economy—and what, whatever else goes with it," she told the girl behind the appointment desk, with a grand flourish made with a careless little gesture of one hand.

When it was all over she was almost afraid to look at herself in the mirror.

"If I may say so, Mademoiselle, she is a different person! Before you were a very pretty jeune fille. Now you are a truly beautiful woman."

But it was the first time in over two years she ever had drawn anything for purely selfish—and therefore wicked, in Randy's eyes—purposes.

Funny, how she measured everything by Randy's yardsticks; she had not realized until today how often she did that in regard to everything she did and said and thought.

When she came out of the shop, Hildred decided to postpone going home and to see where her feet, and whatever impulses were guiding them on, should direct her. They hesitated, though not for long, outside the window of another small, exclusive establishment devoted to the art of beauty.

"I'd like to have a shampoo and a set," Hildred hoped that was what it was called—she always washed her own hair because of its natural wave and that also natural economy—and what, whatever else goes with it," she told the girl behind the appointment desk, with a grand flourish made with a careless little gesture of one hand.

When it was all over she was almost afraid to look at herself in the mirror.

"If I may say so, Mademoiselle, she is a different person! Before you were a very pretty jeune fille. Now you are a truly beautiful woman."

so perfect that Hildred knew it was what she wanted—the dress she simply must have—the moment the saleslady brought it back to hold it up silently before her.

"I'll take it!" Hildred finished the whole gamut of emotions with one last final triumphant flash of daring, much like her defiant toss of head. "How much is it please?" she asked indifferently, if with inward trepidation.

"Only seventy-five dollars, Madame," the saleslady purred in such a way as to intimate that that was practically giving the garment away as a present.

Hildred said, "I'll have to write a check, if you'll get a pen, please." She said it as if used to writing such checks for such expenditures every day. It would take her a year, or six months at the least, to make up that deficiency drawn from her savings account. But it was the first time in over two years she ever had drawn anything for purely selfish—and therefore wicked, in Randy's eyes—purposes.

Funny, how she measured everything by Randy's yardsticks; she had not realized until today how often she did that in regard to everything she did and said and thought.

Jews Claiming New Gains in N. Palestine

Haifa, Palestine, May 7 (AP)—Jews claimed today to have seized new territory from northern Palestine Arabs in the waning days of Great Britain's mandate over the Holy Land.

British rule is to end at midnight (5 p. m., Eastern Standard Time) a week from tonight. Though the United Nations lately has shied away from its partition plan of last November, the Jews are setting up a government to take over then in the parts they would get under the plan.

The Jewish agency's militia, Hagannah, said last night it's men had captured two Arab villages between Nazareth and Christ's boyhood home, and the Sea of Galilee, and had taken a hill overlooking Safad, mainly Arab city about 10 miles north of the sea.

The villages were Sejera and Arab El Edna. Sejera is west of seaside Tiberias, which Hagannah captured a few weeks ago. Arab El Edna is near 1,929-foot Jebel Et Tur (Mount Tabor), traditional site of Christ's transfiguration.

Hagannah said two Jews were killed and nine wounded and 20 Arabs were left dead in Sejera, and two other Jews died and 16 were wounded in the attack on Arab El Edna, where Arab losses were believed high.

The British army in Haifa said 70 new cases of typhoid were reported yesterday in Acre to the north, crowded with Arab refugees from Haifa. The army said all persons in Acre were being inoculated.

In Tel Aviv, Hagannah said without confirmation that Lebanese troops shelled the Jewish settlement of Ramat Naftali in northern Palestine before dawn yesterday. Newspapers there said Jews holding Yehudia near Lydda airport, beat off a counterattack by four armored vehicles of the Trans-Jordan Arab legion, part of which is in Palestine to help the British in police work.

voyages to grace their homes. All the wood trim in this room is painted white.

To the left of the circulation room in the South wing is the general reference reading room. It seats approximately 50 readers. This room is finished entirely in American walnut including book shelving, trim, large fireplace trim and paneling, and all permanent furniture. The shelving here will accommodate about 2,500 reference volumes.

Browsing Room

At the opposite end of the building in the north wing is the Browsing Room. This is chiefly for periodicals. Designed for comfortable leisure reading, this room is finished in knotty pine with generous fireplace and paneled chimney breast. The walls are lined with shelves of lighter literature, current magazines, and pamphlets. The furniture is designed for comfort and ease, deep leather chairs and davenport, chimney tables, low lights. The atmosphere is an invitation to browsing.

Just outside the Browsing Room doors are two small rooms. One is a bibliography room and the other is the Librarian's office. Also on this floor will be found a coatroom, a cataloging and work room, and one floor of the four-story book stack containing the bulk of the 110,000 volume book storage space.

Display Rare Books

The second floor has as its center an ample exhibition room. This is for the display of rare books and manuscripts, for art treasures and objects of historical interest. Then there are three large rooms for seminars and nine small rooms for conference or special research.

The ground floor is used entirely for book stacks and includes the large safety storage vault containing 4,000 volumes and unnumbered manuscripts and photographs. The ceilings throughout the building are acousti-Celotex sound absorbent tiles and the floors are asphalt tile in most rooms.

Modern high intensity lighting has been provided for all reading and study rooms. It blends direct with indirect lighting and fluorescent. Color psychology has been brought into play in the decoration.

No drab monotony is apparent in any of the rooms. The architect says that he has tried to superimpose on the appealing background of colonial architecture a modern and efficient "Machine of Learning." The success of the building will be determined through its use by students and professors during the next century.

110,000 Volume Capacity
The building has a capacity of 110,000 volumes. It measures in length 124 feet, in height 31 feet to the eaves, and in depth 34 feet. The stack extension is 50 feet wide and 55 feet long; it can be extended westward if that should become necessary.

The architect was J. Alfred Hamme, of John B. Hamme and Son. The contractor was Ritter Brothers of Harrisburg. The total cost of the building was $230,000. This has been provided by the Christian generosity of congregations in the synods supporting the Seminary, by the fine loyalty of the Alumni of the institution, by the constant help of the Directors on the Board, and by the liberal contributions of other friends of the Seminary. To each and all of these the Seminary expresses once more its sincere and profound gratitude.

Air Force Readies Buying Order For 2,700 Warplanes For Peacetime Airmada

SENATE OKAYS 70-GROUP PLAN; TO ACT SWIFTLY

Washington, May 7 (AP)—The air force readied buying orders for 2,727 new warplanes today, awaiting only President Truman's signal to start building a 70-group peacetime armada.

Shortly after the Senate gave a 74 to two vote of approval yesterday to a $3,233,200,000 airpower expansion fund, air force officials announced they were warming up their purchasing machinery.

A Senate-House conference committee was expected to act swiftly to compromise minor differences in the bill previously passed by a 343 to three vote in the House. The measure then will go to the White House where favorable action seems likely despite the $222,000,000 added to Mr. Truman's original request.

Dislike Decision This Year
This was the money tacked on to assure a start toward the 70-group air force rather than the 55 groups first planned or the 66-group compromise put forward by Secretary of Defense Forrestal in his plea for a "balanced" military expansion.

While most of the debate centered on the theme that air power is the best defense against attack, a number of lawmakers left no doubt they would like to avoid an election year vote on reviving the draft and setting up universal military training.

Mr. Truman, who asked for both of these, took scathing exception to a substitute manpower plan put forward by Rep. Leo Allen (R-Ill.), chairman of the House Rules committee.

Allen, whose committee has blocked action on UMT, suggested shelving the draft as well as offering bonuses up to $1,500 to volunteers. Mr. Truman told his news conference yesterday this was the most astute proposition he has seen yet.

Have Until 1952
The air force said he new funds will provide 243 bombers, 1,575 jet fighters and 909 reconnaissance, transport, training, rescue and liaison aircraft by 1953.

Even more important, the air force statement said, is that the new appropriations will buy "that all-important time for which there is no substitute."

It pointed out that the president's air policy commission has set 1952 as the date when the atom bomb secret could be worked out by other nations. The air force said that means that 1948 is the last year in which this nation can start building toward a minimum peacetime air force.

Would Legalize, Tax Race Betting

Pittsburgh, May 7 (AP)—The Pennsylvania Federation of Labor (AFL) has proposed legalized horse racing to ease the tax burden.

A resolution to this effect won the unanimous approval yesterday of the 1,500 delegates attending the AFL's 46th annual convention. The same resolution condemned "new and obnoxious city, school and other municipality taxes" which have recently gone into effect.

Robert Leberman of Pittsburgh, business agent for local 1365, retail clerks, introduced the resolution. He said Pennsylvania is surrounded by states permitting legal racing—New York, Ohio, West Virginia, Maryland, New Jersey and Delaware.

"In almost any community in this state, a person can walk into a back room and place a bet and the state gets no revenue," declared the federation's president, James McDermott of Philadelphia. "Horse racing should be put on a legal basis and the betting taxed."

Conscience Gets Driver 18 Months

Pottsville, Pa., May 7 (AP)—A man police said surrendered because his conscience bothered him was sentenced to 18 months to three years in prison as driver of an automobile involved in a hit-run death nine years ago.

Lawrence Fennessy, a former hard coal mine assistant foreman, pleaded guilty to charges of hit-run driving and involuntary manslaughter yesterday.

Fennessy told Judge Charles W. Staudenmeier that his car struck a man at Ashland, Pa., in 1939. He stopped, Fennessy said, but drove off for fear of the consequences. The victim, Joseph A. Fisher, of McAdoo, Pa., died shortly after the accident, police testified.

Fennessy told the court he moved from the Ashland area but eventually decided to surrender to Philadelphia police.

Air Force Readies Buying Order For 2,700 Warplanes For Peacetime Airmada

SENATE OKAYS 70-GROUP PLAN; TO ACT SWIFTLY

Washington, May 7 (AP)—The air force readied buying orders for 2,727 new warplanes today, awaiting only President Truman's signal to start building a 70-group peacetime airmada.

Shortly after the Senate gave a 74 to two vote of approval yesterday to a $3,233,200,000 airpower expansion fund, air force officials announced they were warming up their purchasing machinery.

A Senate-House conference committee was expected to act swiftly to compromise minor differences in the bill previously passed by a 343 to three vote in the House. The measure then will go to the White House where favorable action seems likely despite the $822,000,000 added to Mr. Truman's original request.

Dislike Decision This Year
This was the money tacked on to assure a start toward the 70-group air force rather than the 55 groups first planned or the 66-group compromise put forward by Secretary of Defense Forrestal in his plea for a "balanced" military expansion.

While most of the debate centered on the theme that air power is the best defense against attack, a number of lawmakers left no doubt they would like to avoid an election year vote on reviving the draft and setting up universal military training.

Mr. Truman, who asked for both of these, took scathing exception to a substitute manpower plan put forward by Rep. Leo Allen (R-Ill.), chairman of the House Rules committee.

Allen, whose committee has blocked action on UMT, suggested shelving the draft as well by offering bonuses up to $1,500 to volunteers. Mr. Truman told his news conference yesterday this was the most asinine proposition he has seen yet.

Have Until 1952
The air force said he new funds will provide 243 bombers, 1,575 jet fighters and 999 reconnaissance, transport, training, rescue and liaison aircraft by 1953.

Even more important, the air force statement said, is that the new appropriations will buy "that all-important time for which there is no substitute."

It pointed out that the president's air policy commission has set 1952 as the date when the atom bomb secret could be worked out by other nations. The air force said that means that 1948 is the last year in which this nation can start building toward a minimum peacetime air force.

Would Legalize, Tax Race Betting

Pittsburgh, May 7 (AP)—The Pennsylvania Federation of Labor (AFL) has proposed legalized horse racing to ease the tax burden.

A resolution to this effect won the unanimous approval yesterday of the 1,500 delegates attending the AFL's 46th annual convention. The same resolution condemned "new and obnoxious city, school and other municipality taxes" which have recently gone into effect.

STATE TO STEER VETS TO JOBS

Harrisburg, May 7 (P)—The commonwealth set out today to help student veterans steer clear of training courses in fields "where there isn't a ghost of a chance for a job."

The state plans to compel private trade schools to tell veterans in advance of the job opportunities in the courses they offer.

Dr. Paul L. Cressman, director of instruction in the Department of Public Instruction, in announcing the move, declared that unless "something is done, we are going to have a great number of frustrated youths in America."

"What is going to happen," he stated, "is that there will be many thousands of men trained in fields where there isn't a ghost of a chance for a job."

Cressman named specifically the large numbers of veterans taking courses in refrigeration, radio and watch repairing in private trade schools licensed by the state.

"I have also been informed," he said, "that there are 1,000 boys taking up aviation for every chance of a job and 150 are taking up automotive engineering for every opportunity."

Baby Bunnies May Bring Stiff Fine

Harrisburg, May 7 (P)—Baby bunnies and other young game found in the woodlands must not be removed—unless you want to pay a stiff fine, says the state game commission.

The commission said every year it becomes foster mother to many wild youngsters because "people think they are lost, orphaned or abandoned and take them home."

The wild parents, however, are usually close by, game officials explained, and will return as soon as human beings depart.

The commission emphasized that disturbing such wild creatures is illegal and can result in a stiff penalty.

CIO-UAW Declare Strike Inevitable

Detroit, May 7 (P)—The CIO-United Auto Workers, having quit the bargaining table with a bitter blast at Chrysler corporation, pushed ahead today with plans for a strike they now call "inevitable."

State and federal mediators immediately moved forward with hopes of bringing the warring parties together again before the strike deadline, set by the UAW at May 12.

Terminating wage negotiations with Chrysler to be in a "hopeless deadlock," the union broke off the talks yesterday and told the corporation "its attitude is an insult to human decency."

In a formal statement, Norman Matthews, director of the UAW's Chrysler department, said "There is no point in further negotiations and a strike next Wednesday is inevitable" unless the auto makers change their position.

FIRST BABE SINCE '46

Galeton, Pa., May 7 (P)—Clara May Swan has the distinction of being the first baby to be born in this community of 1,800 in two years. Since the town has no hospital, expectant mothers have been journeying to nearby towns to have their babies. But Mrs. Bennie C. Swan decided to break a precedent and have her baby right at home.

GOP DELEGATES MEET SATURDAY

Harrisburg, May 7 (P)—Pennsylvania's delegation to the 1948 Republican national convention will meet for the first time on Saturday, May 22, the same day the GOP state committee reorganizes. Both meetings will be at the Hotel Bellevue-Stratford in Philadelphia.

Gov. James H. Duff, elected one of the keystone state's seven delegates-at-large at the April 27 primary, was expected to be named delegation chairman without opposition. Duff has called repeatedly for an unpledged delegation up to convention time in June.

A majority of Pennsylvania's 73 Republican votes are expected to go to U. S. Sen. Edward Martin, the state's "favorite son" candidate for president, on the first ballot and subsequent ones if a deadlock develops.

At least 62 and perhaps as many as 67 delegates are expected to follow the leadership of Duff at the convention.

On the other hand, Harold E. Stassen, former Minnesota governor, is expected to get the votes of four and perhaps more of the Pennsylvania delegation on the first ballot. He received a majority of the write-in votes in Pennsylvania's preference primary and a handful of the delegates have promised to back the popular choice.

The American mandrake root can yield laxative medicine.

York, Pa., May 7 (P)—The Central Pennsylvania conference of the Evangelical United Brethren church prepared today to select a site for next year's annual meeting. At the same time the group made ready to receive a list of pastor retirements for the next year.

The conference meanwhile appointed Herman A. Fbert, of Red Lion, to a four year term as a trustee of Albright college, and named Ray B. Lackey, of Carlisle, to serve the unexpired term of the late E. W. Shaffer, of Lock Haven.

MOTHER'S DAY. How can we crowd into one day, or into a few words, our testimony of Mother's unceasing love and unending devotion?

When the glitter of false things is gone, when the deceits of little men are lost and when the chemistry of life has boiled out its dross there stands Mother, smiling, patient, beautiful, in her old apron or her new dress doctor, nurse, teacher, psychologist, cook, philosopher, God's disciple, or just plain "Mom", with the rare perfume of her personality sweetening the burdens of the world and bringing fragrance to the problems of the hearthstone.

TO DEDICATE ORGAN, CHIMES AT ST. LUKE'S

A service of dedication will be held Sunday at 7:30 p. m., in St. Luke's Lutheran and Reformed church, White Hall, of which the Rev. Dr. J. M. Myers is the Lutheran pastor and the Rev. John C. Brumbach is the Reformed pastor. Mrs. Naomi Schwartz is the organist.

A two-manual Wurlitzer electric memorial organ will be given to the church by Mr. and Mrs. John H. Hartlaub, Hanover R. 4, in memory of Mr. Hartlaub's mother, Mrs. Alverta Hartlaub and Mrs. Hartlaub's mother, Mrs. Flora Spangler. A set of memorial chimes will be presented by Mr. Albert Hartlaub, also of Hanover R. 4, and a member of the church in memory of his wife, Mrs. Alverta Hartlaub. This organ and chimes were installed several months ago but due to unavoidable circumstances, the service of presentation and dedication had to be postponed. Since both the organ and chimes are in memory of mothers, it was decided to hold the service of dedication Sunday.

Several months ago the congregations were presented with 21 choir gowns by a friend. These will also be officially presented and dedicated at this service. A servicemen's honor roll presented by the Sunday school and a memorial plaque containing the picture of the Gold Star member of World War II, S-Sgt. Vernon R. Seitz, presented by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Calvin M. Seitz, Sr., will also be dedicated.

Give Complete Program
The program for this service is printed on an appropriate Mother's Day folder which contains the picture of a mother and her two children, a vase of roses and "A Mother's Prayer."

The complete program follows: Processional hymn, "Holy, Holy, Holy"; invocation and scripture lesson; Psalm #4 by the Rev. John C. Brumbach; prayer by the Rev. J. M. Myers; vocal duet, "Ivory Palaces," Miss Betty Hartlaub and Mrs. Robert Spangler; congregational hymn, "My Faith Looks Up to Thee"; presentation of memorial organ and chimes by John H. Hartlaub; acceptance for the congregations, Roscoe W. Rutase; dedication of the organ and chimes. Then will follow the first part of a half-hour organ recital by Miss Doris E. Baker; Hanover, who is organist of St. Mark's Lutheran church, Hanover.

Miss Baker's numbers are: "Alleluia Maestoso (Water Music)" by Handel; "Cradle Song" by Brahms and "Dreams" by McAnis. After the first portion of the organ recital, the choir gowns, servicemen's honor roll and memorial plaque will be officially presented, accepted and dedicated after which there will be an anthem, "The Sunset Glories of the West" by the St. Luke's choir.

Changes in Auditorium
The second part of Miss Baker's recital follows: "Rustic March" by Boey; "Jesus Saviour Pilot Me" by Thompson; "The Old Refrain" by Kreiser and "Toccata" by Boellmann.

The congregation will sing, "Love Thy Zion Lord," which will be followed by the benediction. The recessional hymn will be "Saviour, Again to Thy Dear Name We Raise." The public is invited to this service. During the winter the church auditorium underwent some minor alterations so that the church could get the full benefit of the organ and chimes. A hole was cut in the wall above the choir loft to place the speaker and the screen which covers the speaker has been made in the shape of a cross. A door was also cut into the wall leading into the choir loft to make possible the processional and recessional hymns by the choir.

Gun arabic is used to suspend insoluble compounds in liquids.

Here's the one place you'll find Dynaflo Drive,* in which liquid replaces not only the clutch and manually operated low, second and high, but mechanical gear-changers as well.

No wonder, then, this car is looked up to.

STATE TO STEER
VETS TO JOBS

Harrisburg, May 7 (AP)—The commonwealth set out today to help student veterans steer clear of training courses in fields "where there isn't a ghost of a chance for a job."

The state plans to compel private trade schools to tell veterans in advance of the job opportunities in the courses they offer.

Dr. Paul L. Cressman, director of instruction in the Department of Public Instruction, in announcing the move, declared that unless "something is done, we are going to have a great number of frustrated youths in America."

"What is going to happen," he stated, "is that there will be many thousands of men trained in fields where there isn't a ghost of a chance for a job."

Cressman named specifically the large numbers of veterans taking courses in refrigeration, radio and watch repairing in private trade schools licensed by the state.

"I have also been informed," he said, "that there are 1,000 boys taking up aviation for every chance of a job and 150 are taking up automotive engineering for every opportunity."

Baby Bunnies May
Bring Stiff Fine

Harrisburg, May 7 (AP)—Baby bunnies and other young game found in the woodlands must not be removed—unless you want to pay a stiff fine, says the state game commission.

The commission said every year it becomes foster mother to many wild youngsters because "people think they are lost, orphaned or abandoned and take them home."

The wild parents, however, are usually close by, game officials explained, and will return as soon as human beings depart.

The commission emphasized that disturbing such wild creatures is illegal and can result in a stiff penalty.

CIO-UAW Declare
Strike Inevitable

Detroit, May 7 (AP)—The CIO-United Auto Workers, having quit the bargaining table with a bitter blast at Chrysler corporation, pushed ahead today with plans for a strike they now call "inevitable."

State and federal mediators immediately moved forward with hopes of bringing the warring parties together again before the strike deadline, set by the UAW at May 12.

Terming wage negotiations with Chrysler to be in a "hopeless deadlock," the union broke off the talks yesterday and told the corporation "its attitude is an insult to human decency."

In a formal statement, Norman Matthews, director of the UAW's Chrysler department, said "There is no point in further negotiations and a strike next Wednesday is inevitable" unless the auto makers change their position.

FIRST BABE SINCE '46

Galeton, Pa., May 7 (AP)—Clara May Swan has the distinction of being the first baby to be born in this community of 1,800 in two years. Since the town has no hospital, expectant mothers have been journeying to nearby towns to have their babies. But Mrs. Bennie C. Swan decided to break a precedent and have her baby right at home.

GOP DELEGATES
MEET SATURDAY

Harrisburg, May 7 (AP)—Pennsylvania's delegation to the 1948 Republican national convention will meet for the first time on Saturday, May 22, the same day the GOP state committee reorganizes. Both meetings will be at the Hotel Bellevue-Stratford in Philadelphia.

Gov. James H. Duff, elected one of the keystone state's seven delegates-at-large at the April 27 primary, was expected to be named delegation chairman without opposition. Duff has called repeatedly for an unpledged delegation up to convention time in June.

A majority of Pennsylvania's 73 Republican votes are expected to go to U. S. Sen. Edward Martin, the state's "favorite son" candidate for president, on the first ballot and subsequent ones if a deadlock develops.

"IF IT'S

Call 20-Y

At least 62 and perhaps as many as 67 delegates are expected to follow the leadership of Duff at the convention.

On the other hand, Harold E. Stassen, former Minnesota governor, is expected to get the votes of four and perhaps more of the Pennsylvania delegation on the first ballot. He received a majority of the written votes in Pennsylvania's preference primary and a handful of the delegates have promised to back the popular choice.

The American mandrake root can yield laxative medicine.

York, Pa., May 7 (AP)—The Central Pennsylvania conference of the Evangelical United Brethren church prepared today to select a site for next year's annual meeting. At the same time the group made ready to receive a list of pastor retirements for the next year.

The conference meanwhile appointed Herman A. Fbert, of Red Lion, to a four year term as a trustee of Albright college, and named Ray B. Lackey, of Carlisle, to serve the unexpired term of the late E. W. Shaffer, of Lock Haven.
